

The Birthday Party

Finally it was time for my tenth birthday party! I was so excited that I was jumping _____ (adverb that ends in -ly). The doorbell rang! My _____ (adjective) friend Sam was the first to arrive. He walked in _____ (adverb that ends in -ly) and placed his _____ (adjective) gift on the kitchen table. We waited _____ (adverb that ends in -ly) for our other friends to get _____ (adverb that tells where). Finally they all arrived.

It was time to play games. We all went outside and saw a _____ (adjective) bucket filled with _____ (adjective) and _____ (adjective) water balloons. We had the best water balloon fight.

After playing several games, I opened presents. My friends all brought me _____ (adjective) presents. Then, it was time for cake! My friends sang _____ (adverb that ends in -ly) to me, and then we ate the pieces of cake _____ (adverb that ends in -ly). What a _____ (adjective) birthday!

The New Friend

“Put on your shoes and get ready to go!” yelled my mom _____ (adverb that ends in -ly). My _____ (adjective) sister Kayla and I got ready and ran downstairs _____ (adverb that ends in -ly). We had no idea where we were going, and mom and dad wouldn’t tell us. We got in the car, and Dad started driving _____ (adverb that ends in -ly). Kayla and I tried and tried to get our parents to tell us where we were going, but they wouldn’t give in.

Finally the _____ (adjective) car came to a stop in front of the local animal shelter. Dad announced _____ (adverb that ends in -ly), “It’s time to pick out a new friend to bring home.” _____ (adverb that ends in - ly), we rushed inside to look at all the _____ (adjective) cats and dogs.
Kayla and I decided that we wanted a cat. Finally, a _____ (adjective) and _____ (adjective) caught our eye. I picked her up, and she purred _____ (adverb that ends in -ly) in my arms. I knew she was the one!
Kayla and I named her Lucky.
